Which kind of projects are you looking for?	Voice4You is seeking partnerships for democracy and media and information literacy (MIL) projects aimed at empowering young people, enhancing their media and information literacy skills, and amplifying their voices in democratic conversations. The Mobile Stories method helps young people become responsible creators of trustworthy content. It also supports media outlets by demonstrating the principles of journalism and enabling young people to apply journalistic methods as young citizen reporters. This can be integrated into school curricula or used by organizations outside of schools to raise awareness about specific issues. Media organizations can contribute by providing video content featuring their journalists as experts, sharing valuable tips in a digital newsroom, and fostering trustful relationships with younger audiences. This method can be adapted for various initiatives, such as: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Organizing contests for young reporters. • Gathering insights from youth. • Facilitating dialogues between young people and decision-makers or subject-matter experts. We are looking for organizations and projects that could benefit from integrating this proven, high-performing tool into their initiatives. The tool is highly adaptable to new geographical or cultural contexts. While it is currently tailored for schools and youth organizations, it can also be modified for use with adults.
